In 2008, I met PFC Michael Patton while helping him check into his new duty station. What a great young man. Two Months Later Michael called to see if I could take his wife to the airport, because she was here to see him off. He was deploying to Iraq in two days. Michael and his wife Amy were high school sweethearts, who just married. Two days later I am watching Amy and Michael embrace, kiss and say farewell. Amy told me, how much it meant to Michael and herself that someone was there to take care of her, after he deployed. What a very emotional ride Amy and I had, while we cried and gave each other strength and encouragement... there is more to the story... Three months later little Amy Patton called me to inform me that Michael had been killed in a roadside bomb attack. All because of one ride, we were a support system for each other throughout the funeral and grievance period. Till this day we are friends... this is just one of thousands of connections we experience each year.
